

SONA SYSTEMS CONSENT FORM

CAREFULLY READ THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION

I am invited to participate in a psychology study conducted by Matthew Armstrong under the supervision of Dr. Daniel Krauss. The study will involve reading a brief, fictional criminal case summary and expert witness testimony and providing responses to several short surveys. The entire process should take no longer than 30 minutes. I will receive compensation in the form of 0.5 research credits for signing up for the study through Sona Systems.

None of the information obtained in this study can be personally connected to me.

I may skip any questions or withdraw my consent to participate at any time without affecting my compensation or standing as a student or research participant. There are no anticipated risks to this research; however, it is possible that providing a sentencing decision or reading the details of the fictional case may prove uncomfortable. If I feel uncomfortable I may end the experiment at any time. There are no anticipated benefits to this research, although my participation will help researchers better understand factors that influence jury decision-making.

There is no deception, but the experiment is further explained in a post questionnaire form.

In order to participate in the experiment, I must be at least 18 years of age and meet jury eligibility requirements as follows:

1. I must have a valid driver's license or be registered to vote in my region of residence.
2. I must be a U.S citizen.
3. I must be at least 18 years of age.
4. I cannot have been convicted of a felony.

The Institutional Review Board of Claremont McKenna College has approved this research. If you have any questions, please contact Matthew Armstrong (marmstrong12@cmc.edu | Story House Box 135) or Dr. Daniel Krauss (dkrauss@cmc.edu | Seaman Hall 231) or Dr. Mike O'Neill (moneill@cmc.edu | Adams Hall 214).

By clicking yes, I am agreeing to participate and have read the above information. I also agree that I meet jury eligibility requirements.

Yes, I agree to participate ____

MTURK CONSENT FORM

CAREFULLY READ THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION

I am invited to participate in a psychology study conducted by Matthew Armstrong under the supervision of Dr. Daniel Krauss. The study will involve reading a brief, fictional criminal case summary and expert witness testimony and providing responses to several short surveys. The entire process should take no longer than 30 minutes. I will receive compensation in the form of a monetary sum not exceeding $0.25 for participation for signing up through Amazon's Mechanical Turk.

None of the information obtained in this study can be personally connected to me.

I may skip any questions or withdraw my consent to participate at any time without affecting my standing as a research participant. There are no anticipated risks to this research; however, it is possible that providing a sentencing decision or reading the details of the fictional case may prove uncomfortable. If I feel uncomfortable I may end the experiment at any time. There are no anticipated benefits to this research, although my participation will help researchers better understand factors that influence jury decision-making.

There is no deception, but the experiment is further explained in a post questionnaire form.

In order to participate in the experiment, I must be at least 18 years of age and meet jury eligibility requirements as follows:

1. I must have a valid driver's license or be registered to vote in my region of residence.
2. I must be a U.S citizen.
3. I must be at least 18 years of age.
4. I cannot have been convicted of a felony.

The Institutional Review Board of Claremont McKenna College has approved this research. If you have any questions, please contact Matthew Armstrong (marmstrong12@cmc.edu | Story House Box 135) or Dr. Daniel Krauss (dkrauss@cmc.edu | Seaman Hall 231) or Dr. Mike O'Neill (moneill@cmc.edu | Adams Hall 214).

By clicking yes, I am agreeing to participate and have read the above information. I also agree that I meet jury eligibility requirements.

Yes, I agree to participate ____