“Environment and the Constitution”

The rise of environmental regulation over the last 40 years has required the broadest of “emanations and penumbras” in the Constitution. Discontent with many aspects of environmental regulation has revived a number of constitutional controversies that were thought settled or closed. Making environmental rules is more contentious than rules for other industries, and is forcing reconsideration of several aspects of administrative government.

Steven F. Hayward, who will discuss the question of the environment and the Constitution, is currently the Ronald Reagan Distinguished Visiting Professor at Pepperdine University’s Graduate School of Public Policy. From 2002 to 2012 he was the F.K Weyerhaeuser Fellow in Law and Economics at the American Enterprise Institute. He is the author of Index of Leading Environmental Indicators, published in 14 editions from 1994 – 2009, and its successor, the Almanac of Environmental Trends. Hayward is also the author of a two-volume narrative history of Ronald Reagan and his effect on American political life, The Age of Reagan: The Fall of the Old Liberal Order, 1964-1980, and The Age of Reagan: The Conservative Counter-Revolution, 1980-1989. His other books include Churchill on Leadership, Air Quality in America, Greatness: Reagan, Churchill, and the Making of Modern Statesmen, and The Politically Incorrect Guide to the Presidents from Wilson to Obama.

Hayward holds a Ph.D from Claremont Graduate School, and writes frequently on topics that include environmentalism, law, economics, and public policy for publications such as National Review, Reason, The Weekly Standard, The American Spectator, The Public Interest, the Claremont Review of Books, and Policy Review. His newspaper articles have appeared in the New York Times, Washington Post, and the Wall Street Journal.
